Papali'i Monalisa marches on to higher achievements

By: Jasmine Netzler - Iose

It's safe to say that Papali'i Monalisa Tiai-Keti is a pioneer in the law enforcement profession, with her history making appointment a few years back, as Samoa's first woman Deputy Commissioner of Police and Prisons.

Ironically just last month, Papali'i was named as the 2 top candidates for the Commissioner's post which she narrowly missed.

But showing her true colors as a professional and educated woman, Papali'i is marching on by continuing her services to Samoa as their Deputy Commissioner and at the same time pursuing higher educational achievements.

She holds a Masters in Trans National Crime from the Wollongong University, Australia complemented by a Bachelor of Social Science from the University of Waikato, (NZ) and this month Papali'i walked away from the USP graduation commencement exercise with a Bachelor of Law.

Miss Samoa NZ, Shilohm Vaeluaga Filipi

Miss Samoa New Zealand Shilohm Vaeluaga Filipi

By: Marc Membrere

As the oldest in a family of 6, she has no other choice but to lead by example for her siblings to follow suit.

And raising her hand to represent the Samoans residing in New Zealand as their flag carrier in the 2022 Miss Samoa Pageant is meeting that huge responsibility which now demands taking the lead for all Samoan ladies and tamaitai living in the Land of the long white cloud.

A devout Christian the 22-year New Zealand born, Shilohm is passionate when it comes to church and Samoan family values.

"My whole life has revolved around my family and service to the church," she admits. "In whatever I do - I do it 110% to serve others and most importantly glorify God."

"Our Samoan values of alofa, tautua and faaloalo were instilled in me from a young age and so I have always made sure I portray these values in what I do and say," added.

Culturally, she is obsessed with the Siva Samoa and Samoa's performing arts.

"I am a proud Samoan and will never pass an opportunity to show case how proud I am of my Samoan heritage."

She hails from the villages of Siumu, Matautu-Lefaga, Saanapu, Saleapaga, Saleaumua and Vaovai Falealili.

She presently works as an Admin Support at Taeaofou I Puaseisei Pre-School while pursuing her Bachelor of Communications.

Miss Samoa Victoria Olivia Grace Unasa Siaosi

By: Marc Membrere

Olivia will let her action do the talking when she takes the stage on September 10th as Miss Samoa Victoria, as one of the 8 contestants vying for the 2022-2023 Miss Samoa Crown.

Based in Melbourne, the 20-year-old is passionate with music, singing and has been active in the performing arts throughout her educational life.

"Music is a great passion of mine as it is a universal language understood by all," says the Retailer & Visual Merchandiser with the Mary-Allen & Bree Company.

"I have grown up singing and continued my love for the performing arts throughout my school years," she confesses.

Ms. Siaosi is currently studying Health Science/Nursing at the La Trobe University in Melbourne.

Samoa Peleina - the burning desire for home

By: Marc Membrere

The burning desire to return home is articulated in the 2022-2023 Miss Samoa Pageant theme, Samoa Peleina, says Pageant Chairman Leiataualesa Jerry Brunt unveiling the thinking behind organizing and coordinating the event, which has been absent for three years due to the COVID19 pandemic on the heels of the Measles outbreak.

Dubbed as the grand finale for the annual Teuila Festival, the Pageant is one of the main tourism revenue earners attracting hundreds of overseas Samoans to return home to visit families and cheer for their contestant.

This year however the pageant has been injected into the long running events for Samoa's celebrations of its 60 Independence Celebrations.

But, it is without a doubt with the borders recently opening on August 1 family and friends stranded overseas due to COVID-19 travel restrictions will already have a burning desire to return to their beloved Samoa.

With 8 contestants (6 from overseas) raising their hands to showcase their patriotic desires to show they are Samoans it will be the event to look out for.

Manaia Events Inc, Chair Leiataualesa Jerry Brunt in an exclusive interview with Savali Newspaper confirmed the theme for the event as 'Samoa Peleina'.

He said the theme echoes upon Samoans finally returning home after years of border lockdowns from COVID-19 to see their beautiful and beloved Samoa once more.

COVID struck the world in early 2020, lives were completely changed as nations closed their borders, and thousands of Samoans could not return home.

Fast forward close to 3years, the world is slowly going back to normal and Samoa is welcoming home her children with open arms.

Having travelled overseas recently to the United Kingdom, Leiataua told of his return trip to Samoa, the plane was full of Samoans who have not been home since the pandemic, and who were emotional at the sight of home.

This is a memory still fresh in his mind as he recalls the time the passengers cried out "We're home"! Leiataua claims as the plane touched down at the Faleolo International Airport he was reminded that despite barriers, people will always find their way back home.

With this in mind the theme of Vodafone Miss Samoa 2022 "Samoa Peleina" claims a personal connection to all Samoan's - beloved Samoa!

He said, 'Penina Samoa' doesn't have to be looked up in a dictionary.

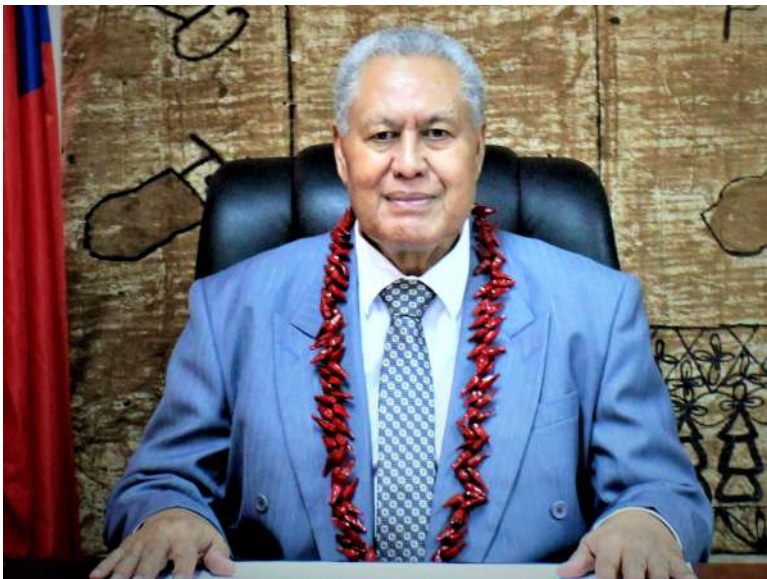

"For me it's home - this is home regardless of where we go. Maybe we go for two years or three years but we always have that burning desire to go home."

Referring to the 8 contestants that will be part of the pageant, and their relation to the theme Leiataua claims they all have a strong connection to Samoa, and are proud to be Samoans.

"It is a theme that we feel strongly about especially with borders open now. They have been wanting to come, and you will be amazed at the number of supporters that are actually travelling with the contestants from overseas," he said.

The contestants from overseas are heavily involved in the Samoan communities, win or lose, each of them will be enriched with the language and cultural experience gained from being part of the pageant.

"It's first-hand experience for them to realize that the Samoan culture is very much alive back home."

Head of State

Tama a 'Āiga Re-appointed as Head of State

By: Jasmine Netzler-Iose

Parliament this morning re-appointed Tuimaleali'ifano Va'aletoa Sualauvi II to continue as Samoa's Head of State for a second five year term.

Prescribed by a constitutional amendment endorsed by Parliament in 2019, this will be the Tama a 'Āiga's last term in office.

The amendment mandates two five - year terms for the Head of State.

Tuimaleali'ifano was the sole candidate recommended by Government dictated by Article 18(1) of the Constitution articulating the process in the announcement of the selection and approval of a Head of State.

And when the nomination was declared Article 18 (5) by the Speaker of the House Papali'i Li'o Oloipola Taeu Masipau, the House voted unanimously without reservations.

Tuimaleali'ifano was sworn in as Head of State of Samoa on the 21st of July and is the holder of one of Samoa's four Tama a 'Āiga titles.

A member of the Congregational Christian Church Samoa (CCCS) and a Lay Preacher, he attained a Bachelor of Laws degree from the Australian National University and a Diploma in Theological Studies from the Malua Theological College.

Tuimaleali'ifano is a lawyer who had served Samoa as Principal State Solicitor in the Office of the Attorney General, as Public Trustee, as Public Defender in the Ministry of Justice, and Chief Inspector of the Ministry of Police.

He is also a former President of the Samoa Ex-Police Association, and is a member of the Samoa Law Society.

GENERAL MANAGER - SAMOA LAND CORPORATION

And one of Papali'i's ultimatum is to see more women joining the force.

"More women should apply into the Ministry especially degree holders - the old reputation of the Police only being a place for early school leavers is no longer," elaborated the DC.

The 40-year-old revealed her encouragement in an exclusive interview with the Savali Newspaper to catch up with her progress in the Ministry.

Papali'i shared her challenges and struggles as a female constable; juggling motherhood, family life and her efforts that eventually led to her obtaining ranks in the management.

There are so many opportunities to build careers inside the Ministry of Police Papali'i said.

According to her this was something she didn't realize when she first applied for employment in the Ministry. But, "I realized this after recruitment".

"I urge more women to apply to the Ministry of Police even those with degrees because there are so many opportunities here."

Papali'i said there's Forensics, traffic, the Criminal Investigation Division (CID), Maritime and many other divisions.

She strongly feels anyone can build a good public service career and learn so much in different areas and every day you are faced with something different she said.

In the early years of her career, she was faced with countless challenges that often had her re-think continuing her service with the ministry.

WHY APPLY?

In fact, when she applied to the Ministry, "it was a place where school leavers applied and was not for graduates with degrees".

When she returned home, like many new overseas scholarshis graduates she was enthusiastic and hopeful of being settled into employment with the Government of Samoa as soon as possible.

She was a study enthusiast that made the New Zealand Government Scholarship Awards and who staunchly worked to obtain her degree with discipline to 'give to my parents who raised me'.

"I wanted to get a job and provide for them as they did for me and my siblings." She has seven siblings excluding her. But destiny had other plans, "I went to the Public Service Commission (PSC) and was told that I had to wait because there were no available jobs".

Her father was a grounds man at the Papauta Girls College. His wages according to Papali'i is what kept them all in school with support from her uncle who was also a Police officer.

"Despite earning little money and that all went into our food he (father) still encouraged us to attend school," she said.

"And later on, when I attended Samoa College my uncle, a Police officer and also another reason I applied to the Police paid for my school fees and all other educational expenses."

Papali'i claims it was these thoughts that kept her steadfast while being challenged in her studies overseas and would also be what would keep her tenacious enough to withstand the many trials in the first years with Police.

As an overseas graduate armed with a Bachelor of Social Science degree from the University of Waikato, she eventually had to take the last option - apply to the Ministry of Police.

"It had a reputation back then as a place where teens who had not continued their studies to the tertiary level would apply to work."

But, having no other real options and PSC still had not contacted her about a job with any of the Government ministries she took the risk, passed the entrance exam and eventually was recruited.

All international scholarship awardees must return to Samoa to serve a two-year bond. Papali'i was no different being one of many who worked hard enough to earn a New Zealand scholarship.

EARLY YEARS WITH POLICE

As a new recruit, and a woman with a degree this did not sit well with many of the officers who had served for many years in the Ministry.

Papali'i said this was because as a graduate she was entitled to a different rate for wages. She was also a woman and female constables were mainly assigned to carry out office duties like letter typing and provide secretarial assistance to the male officers.

"I do not blame them (women) because it was the practice in those days so they didn't take to the idea of a woman coming on board with a degree and also being assigned to carry out duties and responsibilities that male officers were usually manned for.

"They had the same mentality back in the homes - women were meant to stay in the houses to tend to such things as cooking and cleaning while brothers were sent out to work the plantation and do heavy work - this was how it was in the Ministry."

This might have been what it was then but it is no longer Papali'i claims with some pride. There is more support for women in the Ministry as they have earned respect in the force because they are just as capable to carry out police work as their male counterparts.

Hard work, zeal - path to senior rankings: C.J.

By: Marc Membrere

Getting to the top of the law fraternity is a daunting task.

The friendly advice was delivered by Chief Justice Satiu Simativa Pirese to the five new lawyers admitted to the bar, last week Thursday.

They would have to work hard and be dedicated because “those standing with seniority have earned it,” said the CJ.

“The only way to earn your way and pave your way is through hard work and dedication,” he said.

He told the new lawyers that there will be cases they will win, and some that they will lose.

But always remember the five principals of becoming not just a good lawyer but a great lawyer.

“Ask yourself what are the issues, be a master of the facts of the case, research the law, be courteous to your fellow learned friends and always remember you each represent parties with different views and be honest at all times,” elaborated Satui.

His Honor did not mince his words when he told them that there was no expectation of them becoming top-quality lawyers overnight following their admission to the bar.

“We, the judiciary, would like to see each of you make a genuine

U.K. graduate overcomes online education obstacles

By: Marc Membrere

Roylina Mamae Posini’s trials and tribulations from her online quest for educational excellence, has been a character-building experience and has made her a better and stronger person.

And the new graduate from the University of Bristol (United Kingdom) is cherishing her sacrifices.

Without a lot of fanfare, no thanks to the COVID19 pandemic Roylina had silently made history attaining a Masters in Education Open Pathway from the Bristol University in 2021 but her moment of glory was at last recognized today by the UK High Commission in Samoa.

A former Samoa College student, she holds a Bachelor Degree in Arts from the Victoria University in Wellington.

Receiving the UK’s Chevening Scholarship led her to an Institution in Europe, a place where she had always want to study due to the level and standard of UK’s universities.

Having studied online during the duration of the scholarship programme, Roylina pointed out that the journey was difficult.

“It was a 12-hour difference and that would be draining for me,” she told the Savali Newspaper on yesterday.

She recalls being awake from 8pm to 4am studying, a struggle she was not prepared for.

“It was the first time I ever experienced depression and this is a topic that’s hardly talked about especially in the average Samoan family,” she says.

“I tried to deal with it the best I could but I think coming out of it, one tip I would give to anyone (doing) online learning is to never isolate yourself from your family and to always seek help if there is no counselor near you, (and) there is always online resources to resort to.”

She shared that it was a scary experience but with the lessons she has learned, she now has a better coping mechanism with stress and feels that she is now a stronger person.

Among her inspirational mentors she acknowledges Dr Tagataese Tuia, a professor at the National University of Samoa who had provided unconditional support, encouragement and guidance.

Atoa o Samoa Executive meeting re-scheduling requested

By: Nanai Taofiga
Laveitiga Tuiletufuga

Prime Minister Fiame Naomi Mataafa has received a formal request from American Samoa Governor Lemanu Peleti Mauga to consider re-scheduling the Atoa o Samoa Executive meeting to mid-October due to pressing issues surfacing in the territory.

In his letter to Prime Minister Fiame Naomi Mataafa, dated August 17, 2022 leaked to the Samoa News daily in American Samoa Governor Lemanu cited the declaration of a State of Emergency in relation to the volcanic activities in Ta'u Manu'a also known as the Vailulu'u Volcano.

The local MET Office is also keeping a keen watch on the volcano.

Secondly, September is when Budget hearings for the American Samoa Government will take place which will require the heads of Government to be present during the review by the territory's Senate and House of Representatives.

With her Masters, Roylina is getting out of her comfort zone seeing opportunities such as Education the untapped potentials for Technical and Vocational Education and Training in Samoa.

"Our kids have a different learning mechanism compared to kids that would thrive and survive within the mainstream education. I find that kids from vulnerable families and middle to low income, they have a very short attention span and they really thrive under hands on education," she said.

She says that she is now passionate about advocating for TVET pathways.

Roylina is the daughter of the late Roy Mamae and Atalina Hunkin Mamae. She is the wife of Ronnie Posini, the son of Leana Ronnie Posini and Rosemary Posini.

She was awarded a certificate of completion on Thursday from the UK High Commission in Samoa together with Fata Brian Junior Kaio who studied Postgraduate Diploma in Diplomatic Studies at the University of Oxford.

Roylina shared her valuable look, learn and live experience as a recipient of the scholarship to motivate and encourage the four new scholarship recipients announced by the UK High Commission's Office yesterday.

The new scholars include;

- Joy Lydia Papalii (MSc in Economic Development and Policy Analysis at the University of Nottingham)

- Frances Angelica Salele-Sefo (Masters of Communication, Media Practice and Public Relations at the Swansea University)

- James Site Faiumu (MSc in Accounting and Financial Management at the University of Essex)

- Lupematasila Marlene Kathlene Mulipola (MSc in Human Rights and International Politics at the University of Glasgow).

as 2 Samoa Talks were held in July in the territory with the second round of talks approved by the two Governments to take place in Samoa in early September.

Back in American Samoa, Governor Lemanu in his Executive Order had cited the facts and evidence gathered so far have supported a compelling reason to prioritize the protection of life and property in Manu'a.

"By signing this Executive Order, I want to ensure that all local resources are made available to respond efficiently and effectively in case these eruptions worsen."

"I want to recognize and commend the first responders that are on the ground and have been standing by in Manu'a.

Many of them have been mobilized to assist with displaced villagers and guarantee the safety of all evacuees," said Lemanu in his Executive Order.

Electrical Cars needed - Seasonal workers urged to assist

By: Marc Membre

Seasonal workers could contribute to a clean green Samoa after Prime Minister Fiame Naomi Mataafa urged them to consider providing electrical vehicles for the local family transportation needs if they decide to buy a car in future for family in Samoa.

Speaking during the celebration of the 15 years since the founding of the Falealili Seasonal Work Programme on Friday, Prime Minister Fiame highlighted that Chair of the Poutasi Development Trust Tuatagaloa Joe Annandale and his committee have always taken care of Samoa's pristine environment.

Addressing the seasonal workers currently overseas, and those preparing to travel, Fiame emphasized Samoa's commitment to protecting the environment, and encouraged them to think of a greener and cleaner Samoa.

"There are many vehicles these days (that) requires electricity. That is something (for) everyone in the programme to consider," Fiame suggested.

She added that this is what the Government of Samoa was looking at for the future for the replacement of fuel - vehicles fueled by electricity as means of environmental protection.

Tuatagaloa and his committee are no strangers to environmental protection and have led the way in being climate change warriors.

In 2017, they restored a damaged forest planting more than 250 trees at the 'O le Pupu Pue National Park' which was part of a Carbon Offset Project initiated by the Samoa Conservation Society (SCS) in partnership with the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environment (MNRE) and the Poutasi Development Trust.

(Carbon offsetting is the action or process of compensating for carbon dioxide emissions arising from industrial or other human activity, by participating in schemes designed to make equivalent reductions of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere.)

The Prime Minister had also spoke about the purpose of the seasonal work programme, reminding them that it is not an opportunity to leave the country permanently, but to later return after work concludes with the hope of developing families and communities.

She made mention that their work is also instrumental in developing the nation, and encouraged the seasonal workers to return home after work is done to join shoulder to shoulder with the Government to develop Samoa for the people.

“Ever since I became Prime Minister, people have asked what my vision for Samoa is. My answer is, I want a Samoa where Samoans want to live in, built by the people of the country.”

ELECTRICAL CARS
Electrical cars already have been introduced into the country with the first public awareness project carried out in October 2021 in Savaii where these vehicles were brought into the country to assess its feasibility for Samoa.

The government continues to drive the project initiated to encourage sustainable energy use as part of the strategic key outcomes against climate change. The initiative is part of a policy spearheaded by the Government for transition from fossil-fuel vehicles to a zero-emissions economy.

Under a bill that was before Parliament, electric cars such as those made popular by the manufacturer Tesla would be able to be imported free of duty and excise taxes.

The first electric vehicle showcased was a Hyundai KONA courtesy of local motor car dealer Ford Hyundai Samoa.

Members of Parliament, and members of the Diplomatic Corps attended the celebration

CHALLENGES IN THE FORCE

Her male superiors made her work very hard, “they challenged me just to see if I could do the job and whether I would be able to stand it”.

She was even sent to direct traffic but settled on it being an opportunity rather than a negative experience.

Reminiscing on the day she first directed traffic, “I was thankful for that experience, it taught me then that directing traffic was not as easy as it looked”.

“It made me respect the traffic officers more and understood what they went through every day in their line of work,” the AC said.

“Can you imagine under the hot sun, trying to make sure I was directing the cars correctly and making sure because I was short that I didn't get hit by a vehicle.”

Papali'i claims this was a very humbling experience that made her value the job with Police even more.

“I came to understand what the traffic officers felt when they were under the scorching sun, trying to direct traffic and at the same time try not to be hit by a car.

“They assigned me to direct traffic but I said nothing and took on the challenge because I wanted to prove that I was just as capable.”

Papali'i said she never wanted to use the excuse of her being a woman and a degree holder to earn her place in the force.

Instead, “I took up any and all the opportunities that came my way just to prove to them that I can do whatever was tasked to me and do it well”.

Two weeks earlier she graduated with a Bachelor of Law from the University of South Pacific (USP).

A staunch advocate for learning Papali'i claims no one is ever too old or ever too late to be educated(formal).

And the secret to her success despite juggling a family, work and ensuring she keeps the reputation and values of the Ministry and Public Servant at a high Standard - a good support network.

Her parents Papali'i Saumani Tiai and Pelenatete Lio Aмоса and husband Ronnie Keti are responsible for the care and rearing of her children while she attends to her work and studies. Her circle of college friends “who know me as myself” are who I go to and they keep me grounded.

She expressed gratitude to them for their endless love and understanding.
