Prime Minister Fiamē Naomi Mataafa is among the world leaders at the frontline calling out the international community to hear the plea from Small Island Development States, (SIDS) including Samoa to genuinely address the food vulnerability looming over SIDS as a result of climate change shocks.

Addressing the Food Systems Summit 2023 high level plenary session in Rome this week, the Samoa Leader did not make any secrets in revealing the danger looming over the SIDS.

"SIDS, specifically those in the Pacific, overall, cannot address their national food systems as climate change— continues to undermine

“...we are not the major offenders of sustainable extraction”

PM Fiame Naomi Mataafa to the global Food Systems Summit 2023

By: Nanai Taofiga Laveitiga Tuiletufuga

Small Islands Developing States, (SIDS) are bearing “the brunt” of climate change and yet “we are not the major offenders of sustainable extraction” which has provoked these uninvited and unwelcome dangers.

This is the brunt of a bold revelation by Samoa’s Prime Minister Fiame Naomi Mataafa to the international community attending the 2023 Food Summit in Italy this week.

She told the global conference attended by over 160 countries including Prime Ministers complemented 150 non-government organisation representative that “Climate extremes have played a central role in pushing 122 million more people across the globe into hunger since 2019, by undermining agriculture yields across the world.”

And to minimize the vulnerability of SIDS, food security necessitates a multi-layered and interconnected approach.

Continued Prime Minister Fiame, “The complexity of the food challenges in SIDS is well known. Little arable land, climate change impacting the smallholder agriculture farms, and a growing preference for imported foods thereby compounding NCDs and obesity rates.”

But there is more, elaborated the Samoan Leader noting that food safety is also a “growing concern, with fish and seafood; food-borne and water-borne diseases are expected to amplify with climate change impacts and as flooding and cyclones becoming more intense and destructive.”

And ensure a safe and healthy planet for future generations, she urged the Summit for “the global food system must be transformed.”

Prime Minister Fiame also recommended some food for thoughts which include;

1. To respond appropriately, SIDS will need to employ both policy-based and technological methods across agri-food systems to build resilience to the impacts of climate change. Some of these actions include:

2. Transforming the agriculture sector to boost local production, enhancing viability of small industries and promoting the consumption and availability of local traditional foods, using sustainable and nature-positive practices

3. Improving evidence-based knowledge and understanding of food systems and their components, such as climate sensitive farming, as well as implementing climate risk monitoring and early warning systems

4. Strengthening extension services for improved knowledge and collaboration amongst farmers, fishers, and other key players of the food industry. Women and youth have an integral role overall - To transform, to improve, to strengthen. These are our urgent mandates.

5. These require the employment of measures that are integrative and holistic – reemphasizing the food, water, and climate nexus. It will also require adequate and affordable finance and SIDS-specific technology. SIDS hold little sway in global transport and food staple costs. We did not bring climate change impacts to our shores. And we are not the major offenders of unsustainable extraction. But we bear the brunt of all these.”

Samoa hosts Pasefika Lawyers Collective Continuing Professional Development Conference

Samoa is currently hosting the Inaugural PLC Continuing Professional Development (CPD) Conference, Samoa 26 to 28 July 2023 where members of the legal fraternity have gathered to share knowledge.

The conference is a joint initiative by Pasefika legal professional network associations primarily in Australia, Samoa and New Zealand.

It was organised by the Pasefika Lawyers Association Qld Inc (PLAQ) and the Pacific Legal Association NSW Inc (PLAN) in partnership with the Samoa Law Society, with the support of the Pacific Lawyers Association NZ (PLA).

The conference was officially opened on Wednesday at the TATTE Convention Center with the theme “Valuing Pasefika cultural lens in Law and the legal profession”.

Samoa Law Society President Alex Su’a who spoke to Savali said there are over 200 legal fraternity from New Zealand, Australia, Fiji, Tonga, Papua New Guinea, and Samoa taking part in the conference.

The objective is for the lawyers in the region to come together and share their knowledge and skills.

The Samoa Law Society President also added that this is also an opportunity for the legal fraternity overseas to witness what Samoa has achieved that they are yet to.

An example is mediation which 70 per cent of cases taken to mediation have been successful while the other 30 per cent taken to court.

Mr Su’a proudly revealed that this is the first time Samoa has hosted the conference.

Chief Justice Satiu Simativa Perese, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Queensland Australia Helen Bowskill, and Judge of the Queensland Court of Appeal Australia Philip Morrison to name a few were some of the speakers at the gathering.

U.S. strengthens ties with Samoa

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Douglas Emhoff is the highest-profile senior U.S. official to ever visit Samoa.

He is the first ever Second Gentleman and the husband of Vice President of the United States of America, Kamala Harris.

During his recent visit to Samoa early this week that was less than 24 hours, Mr. Emhoff met with Acting and Deputy Prime Minister Honourable Tuala Tevaga Iosefo Ponifasio, and visited Women in Business Development (W.I.B.D.I.)'s Executive Director and Board Member Adimaimalaga Tafunai.

Prior to visiting Samoa he was in New Zealand to attend the opening ceremony of the 2023 F.I.F.A. Women's World Cup, Both these visits however focus on much important matters closely related to the Pacific region and a country like Samoa.

These include; climate crisis, enhancing disaster preparedness, promoting sustainability and inclusive economic development, and investment in the economic empowerment of women.

But, his presence in Apia also marks a deepening of relations between the United States and Samoa reflecting President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris' administration's commitment to the Pacific Islands particularly in addressing climate change issues.

Since Samoa and other island nations are on the front line of the climate crisis it is no secret that is an existential threat.

And so, Second Gentleman Emhoff proudly announced $2.6 million from U.S.A.I.D. in disaster risk reduction for Samoa and other Pacific countries.

Meaning it will aid local farmers improve their resilience against disasters and improve messaging around preparedness.

The $2.6 million is from the U.S.A.I.D.'s Bureau for Humanitarian Assistance (U.S.A.I.D.

/ B.H.A.) to implementing partners C.A.R.E. and Catholic Relief Services (C.R.S.) for these purposes.

Mr. Emhoff also announced that the U.S. would like to further support Samoa and listen to its needs surround the issue of Tsunami threats.

The U.S. government is also committing $117,000 that will go towards work between Samoa and the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration when it provides additional expertise to the Pacific Islands to assess risks and prepare plans.

While speaking at the Women in Business Development Inc. Headquarters on Monday,

Mr. Emhoff commented on how great it was seeing first-hand all the work the Biden – Harris Administration is doing for Samoa.

"Our relationship has never been stronger," he said. "And, we will strengthen it further."

He said that as neighbours and friends Samoa and the United States have shared goals that tackle climate change crisis, investing in economic development, and empowering women.

"And we have longstanding people-to-people ties. I am here to help strengthen these ties," and as a friend and neighbour to Samoa, the U.S. will continue to stand proudly with Samoan people moving forward.

Scholarship Recipient Thanks China for Financial Assistance

By: Leota Marc Membrere

A National University of Samoa Master in Development Studies graduate who spoke recently on behalf of all Chinese Scholarship students praised China for their scholarship awards programme that allows for Samoan students to further their studies.

Daldrienne Taylor – Gafo at the recent Chinese Ambassador Scholarship Award ceremony spoke about the rising costs of education being a major financial burden faced by so many families across the world.

However, Samoa has made tremendous progress in getting children into the classrooms with the help and support of her development partners including that of Chinese foreign aid.

"On behalf of the recipients and the National University of Samoa I would like to take this great opportunity to express our heartfelt appreciation and fa'afetai tele lava to the Chinese Embassy, Ambassador, and the Chinese Government for generously funding the scholarships enabling the students of Samoa to pursue their academic goals without persistent concerns about paying their tuition fees," she says.

Extremely grateful for the helping hand, unconditional and endless support of China's generous contribution she believes this cooperation and partnership between China and Samoa could not have been made without the joint efforts of leaders and people of both countries.

CHINESE AMBASSADOR SCHOLARSHIP

The ceremony held at the N.U.S. Fale last Friday saw 20 students awarded scholarships from Chinese Ambassador to Samoa H.E. Chao Xiaoliang to help them pay their tuitions.

The Ambassador congratulated the recipients who won scholarships for the first semester noting a prudent recommendation and strict selection.

He said it was without a doubt that their families as well as the National University are proud of their achievements.

He urged them to take the opportunity to applaud their hard work and the continuous support from family and friends and for the patience from teachers at the National University.

"Last year, the Chinese Ambassador Scholarship was officially set up. We witnessed 40 students in total receiving the awards," said the ambassador.

The recipients were impressive in their noble virtues and outstanding achievements academically as well as in extracurricular areas.

"Coincidentally, the awardees with us tonight spare no efforts to pursue progress in their research fields, ranging from commerce to education, arts and Samoan studies, which are essential for economic development and cultural preservation. With dedication and hard works, it is foreseeable that you will boost developing vitality in your motherland, in Pacific regions and around the world."

CHINESE GOVERNMENT SCHOLARSHIP

Since the Chinese Government Scholarship was launched in 1982, over 300 Samoan students have been to Chinese universities to further their studies says the Ambassador.

Until now, 86 students are still studying in China.

He stressed that education is pivotal to the enduring prosperity of a country and acting on a people – centred philosophy of development, China continues to develop more equitable and higher-quality education.

"In last five years, the retention rate in nine – year compulsory education rose from 93.8 percent to 95.5 percent, increasing the gross enrolment ratio for senior secondary education to over 90 percent."

China launched a plan that enables institutions of higher learning to recruit students who excel in basic academic disciplines, as well as a plan to cultivate top talent in basic disciplines.

"With 288 training centres open for high – performing students, we continued to develop world-class universities and disciplines. By doing so, China has laid a solid foundation for science and technology development."

Particularly, I'm looking forward to you all benefiting from China – Samoa cooperation and strengthening our profound relationship he stressed.

"At last, I would like to thank you, Prof. Vice Chancellor, and your excellent team of N.U.S., for your continuous support of the "Chinese Ambassador Scholarship" and making the award ceremony a success."

He wished all the students present a bright future and that he looked forward to seeing where the program may take them.

The event was open to the newly enrolled students in 2023 and those who have studied in China previously.

A.P.S. receives vehicle from Japan

By: Leota Marc Membrere

The Animal Protection Society (A.P.S.) has just received a vehicle that will serve as a vital asset in the organisation’s mission to enhance outreach services and provide essential veterinary care to animals in need.

The purchasing of the vehicle was made possible through a grant of USD$75,807 (approximately SAT$202,000) from Japan’s Grant Assistance for Grass – Roots Human Security Projects (G.G.P.).

Japan’s Ambassador to Samoa Keisuke Senta said his government recognises the significant role that Non – Governmental Organisations such as A.P.S. play in safeguarding the welfare and protection of animals.

Samoa too is a nation known for its deep appreciation for nature and the importance it plays on coexisting harmoniously with all living beings he said.

As such their understand of the crucial role that animals play in the ecosystem, and lives ensuring their wellbeing and providing them with the care they require is a responsibility that Japan takes seriously the ambassador further explained.

“Personally I love cats but my wife and my daughter they love dogs so now I have to say that I love dogs.”

Speaking on behalf of the Government of Samoa, Minister of Natural Resources and Environment (M.N.R.E.) Honourable Toeolesulusulu Cedric Schuster gave thanks to the Government of Japan for their kindness.

He said that over many years, Japan has supported the funding of schools and important infrastructure such as wharves, ferries, and others, which are invaluable to the social economic development of Samoa.

“Your support in the provision of J.O.C.V. which if I recall right, also included veterinarians are greatly appreciated.”

And most recently he is also seeing the extension of Japan’s support to funding vehicles that enable some organisations to function effectively.

ANIMAL PROTECTION SOCIETY

A.P.S. has performed an important function for Samoa since its inception almost 30 years, mostly, with limited financial and technical support and without its proper and due recognition the minister revealed.

“You have persevered to provide a critical service for livestock, pets and animals in Samoa.”

He said this is even more important when one notes that we in Samoa many times over the years, have been without a qualified veterinarian.

“A.P.S. has answered the call to assist our farmers, families and even the Police when it comes to caring for animals. For this, I am eternally grateful, and it makes me even more grateful to the Government of Japan that this new vehicle will enable A.P.S. to extend the needed service to rural communities and do more house calls,” said Toeolesulusulu.

He revealed that the society has been a good friend to a lot of people, but many times, due to the limited staff and availability of a properly equipped vehicle, they are unable to save more animals.

“I also want to extend a big faafetai to the tireless volunteers that have served in various role to keep the A.P.S. organisation functioning, this includes our local volunteers and the specialists and veterinarians from overseas. Some serve way longer than they initially were scheduled to, but due to your dedication and acknowledgement of the shortage of necessary staff, you stay longer.”

PM Fiame joins international coalition calls for climate-resilient food systems human, economic and food security,” said Prime Minister Fiame as he reminded the international architecture for climate finance, such as GCF and GEF that “climate finance should not only focus on building hard infrastructure, but also consider support for agrifood systems, gender disparities, and non-communicable diseases because all of these are intertwined.”

She vowed that as members approach the 4th international conference on SIDS next year, the Small Island States in the meantime “will continue to advocate for the finance and technology we need to offer our citizens healthy lives in livable territories.”

She informed the international that Samoa have planned our own Food Systems Pathway 2030 which seeks to strengthen the enabling environment and to build climate resilient practices and resources for agriculture development, including the adoption of social protection measures in response to the impact of shocks, including climate change shocks in food supply and consumption.

But there is still work to be done on food processing, value chain and value adding.

“We will continue to seek out credible and integrated approaches to safeguard our food security,” she concluded.

The Summit reportedly has drawn participants from 161 countries, including 22 heads of state or government, and 150 non-governmental organizations.

A balance of rugby field and classroom

By: Leota Marc Membrere

A partnership between the Lakapi Samoa and the Australia Pacific Training Coalition will enable the youth to take up new skills they can utilise after their time on the field.

The Memorandum of Understanding (MoA) between the Lakapi Samoa and APTC was officially signed on Wednesday opening up educational opportunities for the youth who love rugby.

The Chief Executive Officer (C.E.O.) of Lakapi Samoa Faleomavaega Vincent Fepuleai praised the partnership.

He explained that with the help of APTC, the youth with Lakapi Samoa will be able to take up new skills which will help them in the future after their time in rugby.

Faleomavaega added that a lot of the youth prioritise rugby but the hope of Lakapi Samoa is to give them an educational opportunity and motivate them to further their studies in areas that will benefit them in the future when they leave Lakapi Samoa.

The Lakapi Samoa Chief referring to the partnership with APTC says that it will be long lasting.

“I thank the Government for supporting the partnership with APTC and we are thankful for opportunities like this for a bright future for the youth in Samoa.”

Minister of Education, Sports, and Culture, Honourable

Seuula Ioane Tuā’au in his keynote address reiterated education is vital for progress and a priority for the Samoan Government.

Adding that the Government is committed to ensuring that all Samoans have opportunities for skills development, including in sports, increase their employability and contribute to economic growth.

“The new partnership will help enhance the existing skills and knowledge of Lakapi Samoa personnel, and improve the capacity of the young men and women enrolled in the High-Performance Unit through the delivery of high-quality, accessible and relevant education and training by the APTC,” said the minister.

“In addition, formalising the collaboration between APTC and Lakapi Samoa is in line with the Pathway for the Development of Samoa, which has been developed from the people’s vision of ‘Fostering social harmony, safety, and freedom for all’.”

He commended Lakapi Samoa for partnering with APTC enhancing existing skills and knowledge of staff, and creating education and training opportunities for young men and women in the High-Performance Unit.

The MoU was signed by Chairman of Lakapi Samoa Tuilaepa Dr. Sailele Malielegaoi and Deputy High Commissioner of Australia to Samoa Claire McGeechan.

Samoa Immigration Unveils New Uniform

“The new uniform is their armour and a constant reminder to all who will don this uniform, about their calling to safeguard Samoa’s national borders.” - Prime Minister Fiaame.

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Incoming travelers to the country will be greeted with a new look from Immigration after the launch of their newest uniforms on Monday morning at the office of the Ministry of Prime Minister and Cabinet (MPMC).

The new uniform includes a full set for both male and female immigration officers, rank slides, an identification badge, and an official cap.

The uniform was officially launched by the Prime Minister Honourable Fiaame Naomi Mataafa where she reminded of the importance of a uniform.

“The essence of having a uniform epitomizes unity and identifies a group or an organisation that works together for a common goal,” the Prime Minister says.

However, while that is important, having a duty-bound workforce with a result driven spirit for the betterment of society, are of greater significance she further stressed.

The Immigration officers were also encouraged to be more vigilant in the performance of their prescribed duties at the borders.

Adding that, “The new uniform is their armour and a constant reminder to all who will don this uniform, about their calling to safeguard Samoa’s national borders.”

The Prime Minister acknowledged the assistance from the Pacific Immigration Development Community (PIDC) that funded the uniforms.

STRONGER STRATEGIC FOCUS FOR IMMIGRATION WORK

MPMC Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Agafili Tomaimano Shem Leo reiterated the need for stronger strategic focus and well-coordinated immigration work at the regulated ports of entry to ensure national security, safety of travellers, and timely identification of transnational crimes.

The Immigration Chief also cited the new uniforms is part of the Ministry’s preparations towards the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) in October next year.

He said the new uniform will also help enhance visibility of Samoa Immigration at the borders.

Immigration’s Assistant Chief Executive Officer (ACEO) Valavala Siaopo Pese during the ceremony presented a gift to the Prime Minister, an Immigration badge to mark the occasion.

Community (PIDC)

The community is a regional organisation that obtained legal entity status in 2015 subsequently establishing headquarters in 2016 in Apia and is a forum for official immigration agencies of the Pacific region.

One of its strategic objectives is ensuring immigration officials are equipped with the skills and tools to manage borders in the region and prevent immigration and related crime.

The organisation’s mission is to strengthen Pacific Border Integrity and promote economic prosperity through regional collaboration, modernisation, facilitating secure, seamless, and efficient international movement of people for safer and prosperous Pacific communities.

Consisting of 21 member countries including Australia and New Zealand, Samoa is a permanent member of its Management Board.

Punialava’a Hands Over $60,000 to SNKF

By: Jasmine Netzler-Iose

The National Kidney Foundation is $60,000 richer today.

Thanks to the popular Samoan Band Punialava’a that made a tremendous contribution that will go towards improving the services of the Samoa National Kidney Foundation (SNKF) for dialysis patients.

The group revealed proceeds from their Punialava’a Families and Friends Charity concert in June this year to be a little over $60,000 in a ceremony held on Thursday at Moto’otua.

Punialava’a’ Nanai Viellani Lale Peteru revealed that the funds are currently in a trust account with Lamb and Wallwork Lawyers.

The total funds: $63,562.46 said the eldest of Rev. Lale and Vini Peteru’s children who also performs in the group.

Adding that, full details about the financials (donors/corporate service and ticket purchasers) of the event is published on the group’s social media Facebook account.

Minister of Health, Honourable Valasi Luapitofanua To’ogamaga Tafito Selesele referred to 1 Corinthians 13.

He said there are three very important traits in such situations; faith, hope, and love but out of all three the greatest of these is love.

The minister also requested Punialava’a that whenever the foundation plans a charity event, that they please rise up to the occasion for support as partners.

He thanked Punialava’a for their contribution towards the work of SNKF.

SNKF receives financial support from the Methodist and Congregational Christian Church of Samoa women committees, donations from businesses and the Government.

Samoa Immigration Chief speaks on UN Counter Terrorist Travel

By: Jasmine Netzler-Iose

A three-day national consultation held early this week at Taumeasina Island Resort touched on a programme that will build necessary capabilities to detect and counter terrorists and transnational crimes at Samoa borders especially during the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in 2024.

The conference titled UN Countering Terrorist Travel Programme on Advance Passenger Information (API) and Passenger Name Record (PNR) started on Tuesday and ended yesterday (Thursday).

Chief of Samoa Immigration and CEO of the Ministry of the Prime Minister and Cabinet Agafili Shem Leo as keynote speaker told of how the UN Counter Terrorist Travel Programme is an important global initiative.

He encouraged the national agencies to take part as many of them know, Samoa will host the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in October 2024 and the successful delivery of this programme will no doubt assist in preparations.

As such Samoa welcomed the consultations for discussions on ways it can assist in strengthening capacities of national border agencies and partner airlines to utilising the Advance Passenger Information and Passenger Name Record data.

This data can be used to monitor and detect suspected terrorist movements and trends through enhanced information exchange said Agafili.

"Equally important is having the ability of our national systems and databases to be able to plug into and support flow of API and PNR information."

But, while there is no recent history of terrorism in Samoa, global trends suggest that circumstances and dynamics can change rapidly and we should not be complacent said the Samoa Immigration

API Global Coordinator IOM (UN Migration) Etienne Micallef, Programme Management Officer UN Countering Terrorist Travel Programme (UNOCT) Vugar Allahverdiyev, CEO Ministry of the Prime Minister and Cabinet Agafili Shem Leo, Programme Management Officer, UN Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (CTED) Motaz Al-Rababah, Project Coordinator UN Migration (IOM) Imogen Nocholls, Magele Vernon Mackenzie (IOM).

Chief.

"We need to continue to advance our border measures as persons of interest, including suspected terrorists are looking to take advantage of our small islands in the Pacific."

Agafili said that nationally, "We recognise the need to have in place, systems and mechanisms to better coordinate our work and responses to all security threats through our National Security Committee and implementation of Samoa's National Security Policy."

He said that Samoa realises there continues to be an array of new security issues that emerge from time to time and so we must continue to review our national policies and strengthen our legislation to address these.

"We are currently undergoing a review of our National Security Policy which recognizes terrorism as a global issue reaffirmed by our support of UN Security Resolutions 2396 and that countering this particular threat requires a collective, whole of government approach in Samoa," said Agafili.

"From a regional stance, the 2050 Blue Pacific strategy aims to enhance a region of peace and harmony, security and social inclusion."

Agafili added Samoa continues to engage with her partners and neighbours by collaborating to have more flexible and responsive regional security systems that acknowledge the breadth of issues impacting peace and security in our region, as well as the contribution the region makes in international fora to progressing global peace and security.

According to Samoa's Immigration Chief, by way of context Samoa initially received a mission from the United Nations Security Council Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (UNCTED) in November 2022.

This meeting was with key agencies and ministries and was conducted within the framework of the Committee's efforts to monitor, facilitate and promote Member States' implementation of particular Security Council resolutions, and to facilitate the provision of technical assistance aimed at enhancing their counter-terrorism capacities.

He said that following the preliminary assessment of the mission consultations by UNCTED, a key recommendation identified the need for technical assistance in the areas including: (i) incorporation of passenger data (API and PNR), and (ii) strengthening systems and capacities to handle information and communication technology (ICT) cross-border investigations. Consequently, Samoa expressed interest to be part of this programme in January this year.

"I look forward to a productive engagement over the next 3 days to advance the implementation of this important initiative in Samoa and the roadmap that will guide the next steps."

Doctors Sign Contracts

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Negotiations between the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) and the Ministry of Health (M.o.H.) has been successful with 16 doctors signing contracts while one will take up the service agreement.

This was confirmed in an exclusive response to the Savali from P.S.C. Chairman Nonu Lemauga Saleimoa Va'ai.

In a Q & A with the Savali, Nonu explained the outcomes of their successful meeting on Friday.

SAVALI NEWS (S.N.) - 1. What is the outcome of the negotiations with MoH? How many are now on board with P.S.C.'s offer?

P.S.C. Chairman (P.C.) - 14 signed last week (Thursday & Friday)

1 is overseas – accompanying Junior Manu Samoa – will sign on return, 1 to sign this week – a few changes to Role Description to finalise contract, (and) 1 has resigned to set up private practice and take up negotiable the "Service Agreement"

S.N. - 2. Were there any changes recommended by M.o.H.? If so, what were they?

P.C. - No changes. Just minor queries on contract terms.

S.N. - 3. Regarding what you mentioned in your last email about long term sustainable skill base, when is the deadline for these 10 scholarships and what are the criteria and eligibility? How much in total will the Government spend on these scholarships?

P.C. - Awards are offered annually under the Government scholarship scheme based on N.U.S. Medical School entry criteria for MBBS degree – a 6 years degree estimated at SAT$15k per year or SAT$90k in total – full scholarship.

S.N. - 4. Regarding the negotiations with bilateral partners on scholarships, who are these bilateral partners? You mentioned Pathology as one specialised area for this scholarship, what are all other fields that will be prioritised in this scholarship? Who will be eligible for these scholarships?

P.C. - Bilateral partners i.e., Australia, NZ, Japan, even with WHO etc. Specialised post graduate fields in the Health Sector – Pathologist, Eye Specialist, Respiratory Specialist, E.N.T. Specialist, Dental Hygienist, to name a few. Current M.o.H. graduate Staff in each field(s) are eligible to pursue postgraduate studies.

S.N. - 5. Do you have any further comments?

P.C. - With merger now finalised, P.S.C. will now progress with P.S.C. Review Phase 2 – Structural Review and address all other outstanding review matters.

From humble beginnings to millions of tala operation: NUS making a difference in the lives of Samoans

By: Jasmine Netzler - Iose

The National University of Samoa has come a long way from 1984 - next year it celebrates its 40th Anniversary. And, minister overseeing Education in Samoa, Honourable Seu'ula Ioane Tuā'au has revealed there will be a celebration in the pipeline to mark this momentous milestone in the school's existence.

Seu'ula revealed this at the recent graduation of the university for more than 200 students from different programmes, held last week Friday at the school's Gymnasium where he delivered the keynote address.

The university has come a long way from its humble beginnings and it has had its fair share of challenges with a mere budget of $5tala, 1 programme (U.P.Y. or the Foundation Year) with 45 boys and girls and 20 plus staff he said.

Today, it operates on a $29 million budget, offers over a hundred (104) academic programmes to 3,900 students and 430 staff.

Seu'ula said the operation of the National University cannot be compared to larger educational establishments overseas of this nature or the University of the South Pacific (U.S.P.) with large operational budgets but 39 is many years and God should be thanked for his blessings.

"We should all be proud of what our small university has managed to achieve over its 39 years of existence."

And although still a relatively small operation compared to larger universities internationally it has made significant milestones.

He revealed the many firsts for the university this year including the appointment of the first female Vice Chancellor, the highest enrolment compared to the last 5 years and the first graduates of the Micro - credentials courses to graduate, and an increase in T.V.E.T. scholarships from 300 to more than 500 reflecting N.U.S.'s commitment to prioritising this programme.

The minister also acknowledged constituencies that have contributed to the education of young people from their districts through funding of scholarships under the $1 million tala District Development Project through their District Development Centres.

The minister also noted the improved quality of I.C.T. services and use of technology at the university to advance and empower skills and knowledge of students in using relevant technology for their studies and in the workplace.

This would support and ensure students successfully complete their programmes of study and contribute to the social economic livelihood of families, church, villages and Samoa he explained.

The graduation last Friday of 203 students who successfully completed their studies in the first semester was a special ceremony according to the minister to ensure securing job opportunities and job promotions.

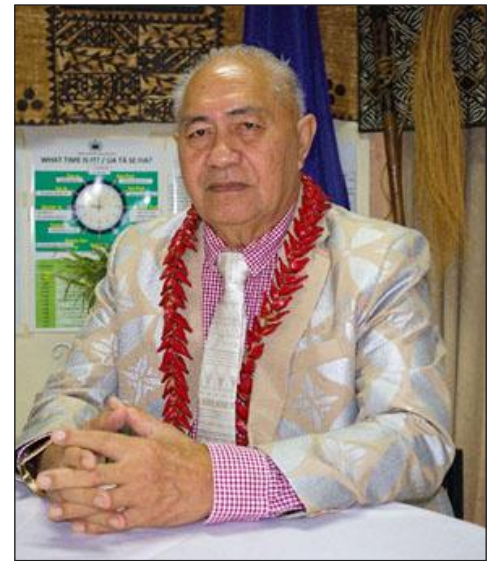

Vividly remembering his graduation in 2021, it was a day filled with God's blessings and grace said the minister.

He was sure they were excited as he had been - they have just accomplished their academic journey - at least the first of many.

The minister urged the graduates to remember those who helped them in their journey to securing their academic qualifications and like many human endeavours there are many others behind the scene doing their part and making their small but significant contribution that resulted in their success.

He told them to be grateful and never forget their help and prayers and to remain humble and true.

"Don't get it over your head and a wise man once said wherever you go remember, God has made someone a little bit wiser than you, so be humble!"

The minister said it was his prayer that the qualifications attained will pave the way for graduates to easily secure jobs to support their families, and their parents to make a small but significant contribution to Samoa's economy.

Completion of merger heading in the right direction: M.o.H. Chief

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Outcomes of negotiations between the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) as the employer and senior doctors on contracts has been called amicable and is a step in the right direction says Director-General of Health Aiono Dr. Alec Ekeroma.

And, in an exclusive Q & A with the Savali, the Director - General says that the completion of the 2019 merge of the National Health Services (N.H.S.) and the Ministry of Health (M.o.H.) will usher in significant development for the specialist medical workforce.

1. SAVALI NEWS (S.N.) - What is the outcome of the negotiations with P.S.C? How many are now on board with P.S.C.'s offer?

DIRECTOR - GENERAL (D.G.) - The outcome of the negotiations between the P.S.C. as the employer and senior doctors on contracts has been amicable and is the step in the right direction. The completion of the 2019 merge of the N.H.S and M.o.H. will usher in significant development of the specialist medical workforce.

2. S.N. - Were there any changes to the recommendations?

If so, what were they?

D.G. - There were, as one would expect with negotiations, some major changes. The introduction of the Responsibility Allowance is a major change in which it will not only manage hours, workload and costs amongst senior contracted medical staff, but it has seen pay parity across the H.O.D.s and specialists in the eight disciplines. Another major change is we now have a near doubling in the number of H.O.D. and specialist positions to 25.

The majority of the doctors, who are permanent staff, have been encouraged to do postgraduate training and acquire skills needed by the Ministry. Their career pathway and progression is more transparent and clearer.

Fourteen of the seventeen doctors offered new contracts have signed their contracts with P.S.C. Another two will sign in due course. One has resigned and was expected.

3. S.N. - According to Nonu (P.S.C. Chairman), 10 scholarships will be offered per year at the N.U.S. Medical School. Will this be a huge help in boosting the numbers of doctors at the national hospital?

D.G. - All Samoan students enrolled at the N.U.S. School of Medicine have been offered scholarships because the quota of 10 per year has not been met. The reason being few students choose medicine as a career and the entry criteria is high with an average of not less than 80% from foundation year science. Other bright students choose other careers and those that will take them for scholarships overseas.

We receive an average of eight doctors per year from N.U.S. and O.U.M. We will need to have about 13 doctors a year for the next 10 years with maximum retention to address our workforce needs into the future.

4. S.N. - Nonu (P.S.C. Chair) had also mentioned negotiations with bilateral partners on scholarships for specialised areas such as pathology. What specialised doctors are needed at the national hospital?

D.G. - The Ministry welcomes all the assistance from the P.S.C. and our development partners in developing our specialist workforce.

We can significantly grow that workforce if we have a pool of young doctors to pull from. We will have that pool of young doctors if we have more capable students, studying science, and eager to take up medicine as a career, coming through the education pipeline.

Rainier visits Samoa

“The future of our planet, oceans, resources and marine ecosystems really depends on our future scientists so it’s really encouraging to me to see so many people who are so interested and engaged in what we are doing in science and the health of our nation’s marine resources.” - NOAA Chief Scientist Hannah Barkley.

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Science students from the National University of Samoa (NUS) and the University of the South Pacific (USP) got a little taste of the work done on board the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Survey Vessel while it docked at Matautu wharf since last week during a port visit.

Rainier a U.S. hydrographic survey ship that maps the ocean to aid maritime commerce, improves coastal resilience, and studies the marine environment left Samoan waters Tuesday this week.

The ship primarily operates in Alaska and Pacific Northwest.

Aside from providing tours around the NOAA to students studying in the different fields of science relating to the work of scientists on board, providing tours for Government officials, the crew also met with Chargé d’affaires to Samoa Noriko Horiuchi.

Speaking exclusively to the Savali on Friday last week, the Rainier’s Chief Scientist Hannah Barkley says it was great to be in a beautiful country.

“The mission is called the Rainier Integrates Chartering Hydrography and Reef Demographics and part of our mission is to map the US territorial waters around American Samoa and in the Pacific remote islands,” she says.

In addition to that they are also conducting coral reef surveys to access the health of our nation’s coral reefs which includes collecting data on climate and oceanography and also the health and population of corals and fish.

Barkley clarified as they are on a NOAA mission, they can only map US Waters.

Seeing all the students studying in the fields of science their team are working in is inspiring to the Chief Scientist.

“The future of our planet, oceans, resources and marine ecosystems really depends on our future scientists so it’s really encouraging to me to see so many people who are so interested and engaged in what we are doing in science and the health of our nation’s marine resources,” she says.

Hannah gives her thanks to the U.S. Embassy in Samoa for organising the programme for them to meet the public and also to all of those who visited their team and ship last Friday.

Eight years since the Bank of the South Pacific (B.S.P.) has served the people of Samoa, at the Customer Function celebrating this special milestone, Minister of Finance praised the financial institution for its contribution to the wider community.

She thanked them for their delivery of value-added financial services to the community here in Samoa and across the Pacific.

Minister of Finance, Honourable Mulipola Anarosa 'Ale - Molio’o representing the government at the event acknowledged that since 2015 B.S.P. has grown to be the largest bank serving the people of Samoa.

From banking services, providing employment opportunities for locals and contributing significantly to the development of the nation, B.S.P. is well recognised for its focus on the community and its funded projects not just in Samoa but the Pacific benefitting families and communities.

The minister acknowledged corporations and organisations such as B.S.P. for filling in these crucial opportunities that provide a pathway for many individuals, families and communities.

“BSP has certainly made a positive impact in our Samoan community and a true measure of that impact is by virtue of the testimonies of our people and B.S.P.’s visibility and engagement with the community at large,” said the minister.

“We are also grateful to B.S.P. for harnessing our local talent into leadership roles for not just here in Samoa but in the region.”

The minister again extended her congratulations to B.S.P. for reaching 8 years of service in Samoa and her people through the delivery of value - added financial services.

“We wish you all well!”

The customer function was held at the T.A.T.E. Convention Center on Thursday night and was attended by Members of Cabinet, Government Officials, and members of the business community in Samoa.

W.H.O. celebrates 75 Anniversary

“Happy 75th Anniversary and I wish you many more years of successful global health leadership.”- Prime Minister Fiame Naomi Mataafa.

By: Leota Marc Membrere

Since its establishment in 1948, the World Health Organization (W.H.O.) has been at the forefront of improving health across the globe, and Prime Minister of Samoa, Honourable Fiame Naomi Mataafa has congratulated them on reaching 75 years of doing just that.

Samoa established formal relationships with WHO in 1962, when Prime Minister at the time, the Honourable Fiame Mataafa Faumuina Mulinuu II, and Dr I. Chi Fang of the W.H.O. signed The Basic Agreement.

And fast forward 61 years and the organisation and Samoa remain good friends, Prime Minister Fiame said during her address at the celebrations.

She called the anniversary a full circle for her given she and Samoa are key parts of the history of W.H.O.

Her father was the Prime Minister who signed “The Basic Agreement” and at the event, more than 60 years later she celebrates WHO’s 75th Anniversary in her capacity as the first female Prime Minister of Samoa.

“On behalf of the government and people of the Independent State of Samoa, I extend to the WHO Secretariat, a wonderful and happy 75th Anniversary! It is indeed a milestone achievement.”

Speaking about celebrations the Prime Minister said it was these times that naturally people ponder and reflect on what the past can contribute to the future.

“Have we made a difference to the lives of other people? What can we do better?”

And according to the Prime Minister, W.H.O. has weathered tumultuous times, as well as done a lot of good in this world.

“From delivering and continuing to deliver evidence-based guidance to our national programmes, to delivering vaccines to help eradicate diseases.”

From global leadership through the COVID-19 Pandemic and resurgence of measles that we have witnessed to the eradication of small-pox globally and the near eradication of polio – the Western Pacific being Polio-free since 2000.

“These are all testament to the fruits of the W.H.O.’s labour and legacy over the last 75 years,” said Fiame.

In the May 2023 session of the World Health Assembly, Member States have been attributed with injecting the lifeblood needed to realise a more effective W.H.O., given the gaps exposed by the COVID-19 epidemic, so that the organisation and our health sector can continue to deliver on its mandate of Health for All, she added.

She extended Samoa’s pleasure to the Head of WHO Office and W.H.O. Representative Dr. Kim Eva Dickson in hosting the W.H.O.’s office in Samoa, which from 1986, expanded its coverage to American Samoa, Cook Islands, Niue and Tokelau.

“... and we look forward to our continued collaboration,” she further added.

She asked that Samoa’s deepest regards be conveyed to the W.H.O.’s Director General, the WHO staff globally and its retirees on whose shoulders the organisation’s work was carried through and continues so today.

“The world owes a tremendous debt of gratitude to you,” Fiame says. “Happy 75th Anniversary and I wish you many more years of successful global health leadership.”

The celebration was held at the Taumeasina Island Resort on Thursday night and was attended by the Prime Minister, Minister of Health Honourable Valasi Luapitofanua Toogamaga Tafito Selesele, Government Officials, W.H.O. representatives and staff, and members of the diplomatic corps.
